MISSION FOCUS

RICHARD & KAREN LEE
Sub-Saharan African Peoples

The Cooperative Program has allowed Richard and Karen Lee to show African Americans they have a place and a role to play in the missionary task. When believers see missionaries who look like them, they feel represented. African American Southern Baptists aren't the only people who've been surprised to meet the Lees. Tanzanian Christians celebrated their arrival. "I have lived here for 40 years, and no one like you has ever lived in this missions house," a neighbor said. "Where are our other brothers and sisters? You're the first ones we've seen who looked like us," Tanzanian Christians asked the couple. African American missionaries have tremendous opportunities to make deep connections on the missions field. Through the Cooperative Program, they help churches think about what those partnerships might look like.

PRAY God would give the Lees abundant opportunities to share the gospel with their neighbors in Tanzania.
